Echoes Across the Valley seems to continue, in an original and startling manner, this East African \"song tradition\" initiated, in part, by Okot p'Bitek in his four songs: Song of Lawino, Song of Ocol, Song of Malaya and Song of Prisoner. When the vulgar politics of Idi Amin and Daniel Arap Moi suddenly set in, however, and the East African Economic Community broke up, the tradition created principally by Okot p'Bitek, Taban Lo Liyong, Jerad Angira, Okello Oculi, Joseph Buruga and ...

As we try to reach those who are on that journey, think of them across the valley. Our thoughts are being carried towards them on echoes of love. Sometimes the quietest voice can make the loudest echo; a force we cannot see brings their voices towards us. But what if we do not hear a voice? No matter. Remember there is a new land to be explored.

Echoes Across The Valley
Echoes Across the Valley. Try and visualise a mountain peak some distance on the horizon. We know behind it lay thousands and thousands more miles. Suddenly that mountain seems nearer. As we remember ones we have lost, imagine they are on that mountain. How much closer they are to us now. Miles or hours cannot measure this distance.
